March 14-17

29th Annual Miami Breast Cancer Conference Multidisciplinary Care for Patients With Breast Cancer Miami, Florida

The 29th Annual Miami Breast Cancer Conference is designed to advance physician performance in the rapidly changing area of the optimal care of patients with breast cancer. On completion of the educational activities, participants should be able to discuss the biologic and molecular pathogenesis of breast cancer development and metastasis, as well as therapeutic implications and strategies for earlier intervention; assess data regarding fully effective surgery for the treatment of early-stage breast cancer, including controversies in the management of the axilla; and identify and refer eligible patients with breast cancer for promising clinical trials. This conference offers up to 27.75 Category 1 CME Credits. For more information call (888) 949-0045, fax (214) 367-3402, e-mail customersupport@cancerlearning.com, or visit the Web site <http://www.cancerlearning.com>.

38th Annual Diabetes and Endocrinology Symposium Sacramento, California

The 38th Annual Diabetes and Endocrinology Symposium is designed to change physician competence in the management of patients with diabetes (type 1 and 2), obesity, dyslipidemia, and endocrine hypertension. The conference will address these identified educational needs and give practitioners new tools to provide improved treatment options for their patients. On completion of this program, participants should be able to name organ specific therapies for type 2 diabetes mellitus, define and use currently available insulin at the right time schedule and in the appropriate doses, and evaluate the metabolic abnormalities at different age groups for polycystic syndrome. This conference offers up to 11.5 Category 1 CME Credits. For more information call (916) 734-5390, fax (916) 734-0776, e-mail cmereg@ucdavis.edu, or visit the Web site <http://cme.ucdavis.edu/conferences>.
