Hyperpigmentation Lotion

TrueTone brightening lotion is designed to reduce hyperpigmentation and other types of skin discoloration. The formula includes brightening, antioxidant, and anti-inflammatory ingredients in a lotion that is easy to apply. The lotion recipe includes inhibitors of tyrosinase, the enzyme associated with the development of hyperpigmentation. Because tyrosinase-treated skin may be more vulnerable to free radicals, the anti-oxidant component is an essential part of the mix. The lotion is appropriate for all skin types, and is meant for use in conjunction with other products in the PCA SKIN collection.

Stretch Marks, Cellulite Therapy

The electro-mesotherapy technology of the MTC-TMT System uses highly effective transdermal delivery systems for active topicals that can rejuvenate the skin and target photodamage, stretch marks, and cellulite. Rapid electrical impulses are delivered from a metal roll-on wand to the skin for a very short duration to create ultramicro-pores in the stratum corneum, increasing the penetration of an active substance into the stratum corneum by 600% more than passive penetration of the substance, according to the manufacturer.

Atopy Skin Barrier Cream

EpiCeram Skin Barrier Emulsion is a prescription medical device cream designed to repair the damaged skin barrier of atopic dermatitis patients. The cream is a ceramide-dominant, lipid-based, first-line treatment that provides an optimal 3:1:1 ratio of ceramides, free fatty acids, and cholesterol. EpiCeram works by creating a vapor-permeable barrier, replenishing physiologic lipids, enriching the ceramide content of skin cells, and normalizing the skin's pH. By repairing the skin barrier, the cream may decrease the need for corticosteroids and immunomodulators. It has shown efficacy comparable to a midpotent corticosteroid in a clinical trial.
